

Asquared

Life, love, and the pursuit of great food in the Windy City.

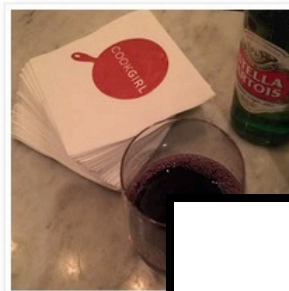

Home

Thursday, February 26, 2015

COOKGIRL Launch Party at Little Goat

One of the things that keeps me blogging even when life gets busy is the cool experiences that I get to take part in. I was invited to an event that turned out to be a total "pinch me" moment and even writing this right now, I feel really privileged to have been a part of it!

The event was the launch party for COOKGIRL, a website dedicated to celebrating female chefs and foodie favorites in Chicago, honoring a handful of the city's favorite female chefs and foodie favorites.

BLOGGER COVERAGE:

COOKGIRL hand-selected eight of Chicago's best food bloggers to attend the launch event – blogging, tweeting, instagramming, and posting to all of their social media pages.

THE Kitchchen
recipes, restaurants & travel

About Recipes Chicago Restaurants Travel Life Shop Press Services

MEET KIT

Follow me on bloglovin'

Subscribe to Blog via Email

On Tuesday I joined an absolutely amazing group of women at a dinner celebrating the launch of CookGirl. CookGirl's goal is to amplify the attention being given to female chefs. There are so many incredible talented female chefs and CookGirl wants to put on events that celebrate them, and to create a fund that provides grants to women in the culinary industry. It was very fitting that the event was held at Little Goat, one of Stephanie Izard's famed eateries.

Sign Up for The Kitchchen's Newsletter

